

Pegasus and her owner

Once upon a time, there was a pegasus called Scarlet and there was her owner Sara. Scarlet was white and she could fly. Sara has a red dress and she likes flying with Scarlet. Sara also speaks animal language.

One day they went to the woods. The woods were fairy like. They were walking and running next to each other. When they ran out of the woods, Sara sat on Scarlet's back. They were off to the sky. They were talking and watching the clouds.

They found a birdie that couldn't fly much. Sara carefully took him. They landed on a meadow. There were many colourful flowers, green grass with butterflies and nice birds. The birdie was sweet, nice and small with a yellow beak. He could swim, too.

There was a small creek. Sara told Scarlet to fly. Scarlet told the birdie to watch. The birdie tried it. He fell down. The birdie tried it again and it fell in the water. The third time it did it!

The birdie could fly and wanted to find his mum. Sara and Scarlet helped the birdie to find her. They found her and she was happy to have her birdie back. The birdie thanked them and Sara and Scarlet got home and they were happy.
